CELEBRATE INNOVATION AT THE WEST CAMPUS

Networking specialist Danny Beyer kicked off the ciWeek 6 agenda with a presentation on "How a Cup of Coffee Can Change the World." Beyer said in starting a conversation with someone you've never met before, don't ask, "what do you do?" but rather, "what do you do for fun?" He said research shows two-thirds of people do not like their jobs, but that nearly everyone enjoys talking about what they enjoy. Beyer said networking is crucial to innovation.

HELEN'S PAJAMA PARTY

Kelly Sargent

Kelly Sargent, founder of Helen's Pajama Party, speaks to a standing-room-only crowd in the Ankeny Campus Bldg. #2 auditorium. Sargent describes how she used the comforting feeling of wearing pajamas to launch a drive to collect enough pajamas to make sure there's a new pair waiting for every woman who seeks shelter at any of Iowa's 13 regional domestic violence shelters. Sargent said between 8,000 and 10,000 pairs of new pajamas have been donated to the shelters. DMACC's Ankeny Campus Phi Theta Kappa chapter held a drive collecting more than 250 pairs of new pajamas to support Helen's Pajama Party.

HELEN'S PAJAMA PARTY(CONTINUED)

Tiffany Allison, a victim of a domestic assault, speaks about surviving the felony assault, false imprisonment and four hours of being beaten by her boyfriend in 2009. Allison received numerous bite marks on her body, was beaten to unconsciousness with hands, knees, feet, and a wrought-iron cross, and urinated on. Allison was her abuser's fifth victim. The abuser received a two-and-a-half year sentence and served just 10 months before being released. Within two years of her abuser's release, he again violently re-offended, this time permanently disfiguring his victim's face. The abuser was sentenced to 15 years for this offense, but will most likely be released after serving only a year-and-a-half to three years. Allison is now a proponent of tougher legislation on violent crimes working with Iowa lawmakers encouraging passage of an Iowa Violent Habitual Offender Bill.
